THE TRAVELLER'S GUIDE

THROUGH ENGLAND AND WALES:

CONTAINING,

I. The Routs from Stage to Stage through the Direct High Roads leading from London to all Parts of the Kingdom.

II. The Direct Roads acroſs the Country, from one City or principal Town to another.

III. The Manſions, Caſtles, and other remarkable Objects, on or near the reſpective Roads.

IV. Separate Alphabetical Tables of all Cities, Towns, conſiderable Villages, Capital Seats, and other Curioſities; with References to the Pages where they are mentioned.

TO WHICH IS PREFIXED,

The LARGEST, MOST ACCURATE, and COMPLEAT MAP of the ROADS through ENGLAND and WALES, ever prepared for any Work of this Kind.

BY THOMAS KITCHIN,

HYDROGRAPHER TO HIS MAJESTY.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR CHARLES DILLY.

M.DCC.LXXXIII.

PREFACE.

THE favourable reception already given to the Map of the Roads that accompanies this work, which has been manifeſted by the numerous impreſſions it has gone through; while it claims the grateful acknowledgments of the engraver, neceſſarily ſtimulates him to a farther effort to deſerve that encouragement the public have ſo candidly beſtowed.

As the diſcharge of this duty has been his earneſt ſtudy, he flatters himſelf it cannot be better accompliſhed, than by ſupplying the following work, which is calculated to illuſtrate this map, and render it ſtill more uſeful; and thereby furniſh travellers with a more copious and correct liſt than has yet been publiſhed, of all the cities, towns, and conſiderable villages, ſituated on the direct and croſs roads throughout England and Wales. For though the map is allowed to comprehend as much as perſpicuity would admit, many of theſe could not be admitted, on account of the ſmallneſs of the ſcale to which it was confined, to render it portable: and for the ſame reaſon, the general diſtances between towns and villages of the greateſt note only, could be introduced into the map; whereas here, not only all the intermediate diſtances between every town and village on the roads, are amply and accurately ſupplied; but alſo the total diſtance of every city, town, and village, from the metropolis.

If the editor's conſtant application to geography, and the arts connected with it, for a great number of years, may be thought a circumſtance worthy to entitle this performance to attention; the judicious reader will doubtleſs give this plea its proper weight, when he ſees how far it deſerves his notice upon a compariſon with other compilations of a like nature. For though attempts have indeed been made, expreſſive of the ſame uſeful deſign of directing travellers in their tours through the kingdom; the compiler of this work declines the invidious taſk of animadverting on the errors of competitors for public fame, whoſe excellence in other purſuits may perhaps be unqueſtionable; but who, for that very reaſon, may have failed in an undertaking foreign to their more immediate ſtudies.

The addition of new roads, and a more perfect regulation of the diſtances on the reſt, though the moſt material, have not been the only improvements the compiler had in view. For in order to accommodate this Directory to the gentleman as well as the tradeſman, he has made conſiderable alterations in the ſeats of the nobility, and other objects of curioſity which offer themſelves along the ſeveral roads: the accounts of which, as given in ſimilar productions, even of the moſt recent date, might have been highly entertaining when ſuch ſeats and their proprietors actually exiſted; but as the reader will doubtleſs be willing to avail himſelf of the alterations neceſſarily produced by time, care has been taken to transfer poſſeſſions to the preſent owners. Hints are alſo occaſionally given, that in ſuch places are to be found the ruins of ſome venerable pieces of antiquity; and that in others, the rude remains of Gothic ignorance have been ſupplanted by more refined productions of modern architecture. So that the traveller will find, that while his information was the principal object, his amuſement has not been overlooked. Errors are ſometimes unavoidable, and time will as unavoidably give riſe to more; therefore any gentleman, who will favour the author, under cover to his bookſeller, with hints of correction, either relating to his own ſeat, or to other objects treated of in this work: or if thoſe who, in travelling for buſineſs or pleaſure, can ſuggeſt any like hints of improvement, that come under their notice on the road; their favours will be thankfully received, and a proper uſe made of them.

The firſt Index prefixed to the book, beſide the names of places, their reſpective counties, and market days, refers not only to the page in which the direct high road is to be found, but likewiſe to whatever different roads lead to the ſame place; the want of which in other manuals, makes it difficult to find many of the roads ſought for. In the body of the work due attention has alſo been paid to references from one road to another. The croſs roads have a ſeparate index, compiled with equal care; and a third index is added, to all the country ſeats, and other objects of curioſity mentioned in the work.

Any thing farther by way of explanation, may perhaps be unneceſſary; the general plan of all works of this kind, being alike: the reader will therefore only obſerve, that the diſtances are given in miles, halves, and quarters; agreeable to the mile-ſtones placed along the roads, which are meaſured from the following ſtations of departure in London: namely,

I. The Portſmouth road, with the branches iſſuing out of it; from CORNHILL.

II. The Huntingdon, and Cambridge roads, with their branches; from SHOREDITCH CHURCH.

III. The Norfolk, Suffolk, and Eſſex roads, &c. from WHITECHAPEL CHURCH.

IV. The Dover, and other Kentiſh roads; from LONDON BRIDGE.

V. The roads to Bath, Briſtol, and the Land's End; from HYDE PARK CORNER.

VI. The roads to Oxford, and Aberiſtwith, with their branches; from TYBURN TURNPIKE.

VII. The Cheſter, Carliſle, York, and Edinburgh roads, &c. from HICKS's HALL.

The additional roads in this book, which amount to ſeventy-five direct, and thirty-nine croſs roads; are, for the better confirmation of what has been above aſſerted, diſtinguiſhed, at the beginning of each, by an aſteriſc (*). The improvements in the other roads, will be ſo obvious upon the ſlighteſt examination, as not to require pointing out.

DIRECT ROADS,

MEASURED FROM CORNHILL:

With the ROADS leading from them to all the Cities, Market Towns, and Villages ſituated thereon.

N. B. The Names of Cities are printed in CAPITALS, thoſe of Poſt Towns in Italicks. The Right and Left Hand Turnings, are diſtinguiſhed by the Letters R. and L. prefixed to the Town to which they lead.

On the left of Putney Heath is Wimbledon, where is a fine ſeat of Earl Spencer; and on the ſame ſide of the heath is a ſeat of the late Sir Abraham Janſſen, Bart.

On the right, beyond Putney Heath, is Richmond Park, one of the ſummer retreats of their Majeſties; the gardens of which have been greatly improved during the preſent reign.

Contiguous to theſe gardens, are thoſe of Kew, where the late Princeſs Dowager of Wales formed a botanical garden under the inſpection of Sir John Hill, which has been deemed equal to any one of the kind in Europe.

On the left is Combe, late belonging to the family of Harvey.

At Thames Ditton is Ember Court, the ſeat of the Right Hon. George Onſlow, Eſq; couſin to Lord Onſlow; and at Eſher is a ſeat late belonging to Henry Pelham, Eſq.

A little beyond Eſher, on the left, is Claremont, a ſeat of Lord Clive.

At Cobham is the elegant ſeat of Bond Hopkins, Eſq; better known by the name of Pains-Hill, formerly the reſidence of Sir Charles Hamilton.

At Ockham, on the left, near Ripley, is the ſeat of Lord King.

On the left, near Guildford, is Clandon Place and Park, the ſeat of Lord Onſlow; and at Godalmin is Gen. Oglethorpe's.

At Aldbury, five miles eaſt from Guildford, is the platform of a Roman temple. The place is alſo remarkable for a paſſage, about a furlong in length, dug through the bottom of a hill, leading into a fine valley. This was undertaken as a way to the houſe, then the ſeat of Henry Duke of Norfolk; but the deſign being obſtructed by a rock, it is now only admired as a grotto.

At Petersfield is the ſeat of John Jolliffe, Eſq; and near it is Maple Durham, late belonging to Hen. Biſſon Legge, Eſq;

On the right of Portſdown is South Week, the ſeat of the late Richard Norton, Eſq; who, in 1733, bequeathed this eſtate to the Parliament.

Near Midhurſt, is Cowdry, the ſeat of Lord Viſcount Montacute: which merits particular notice for its ſituation in a valley ſurrounded with woods, lawns, and hills, which are taken into a park, below which runs the river. The houſe is quadrangular, with a Gothic tower at each corner, which, from the riſing grounds, have a very pictureſque effect.

About three miles from Chicheſter is Godwood, a ſeat belonging to the Duke of Richmond. The houſe is old, but has been conſiderably altered; and the park has been enlarged and beautified by a diverſity of plantations.

The Earl of Scarborough has a fine ſeat called Stanſtead, in the neighbourhood of Chicheſter; from which there is a delightful view of the navy riding at Portſmouth, Spithead, and St. Helen's. From the top of a triangular tower in the park, the ſpectator enjoys an extenſive proſpect of the whole Britiſh Channel.

On the left of 108 is Raynham Hall, the seat of Viscount Townshend; and a few miles to the left of Raynham is Houghton Hall, a seat of the Earl of Orford.

At Walsingham is the seat of Lee Warner, Esq; formerly an abbey.

On the left of Wells is Holkham Hall, the seat of the late Earl of Leicester; but now of Mr. Coke. The building is in a beautiful taste, and finished in an elegant stile; it is built, for the chief part, with white bricks, which, with the white flint rustics, have a pretty effect. The approach to the house is through a triumphal arch, and the ground about it is improved in a pleasing manner.

On the left of Ilford is Wanſted Houſe, a magnificent ſeat of Earl Tilney; the moſt beautiful and magnificent manſion in the county. It is conſtructed of Portland ſtone, and the front toward Epping Foreſt has afforded hints of imitation to ſeveral ſucceeding architects, without having yet been rivalled. The interior decorations are ſuitable; but the park, though pretty, is not anſwerable to the houſe.

A little beyond Rumford, on the left, is Gidea Hall, the ſeat of Governor Benyon.

At 18, on the right, is Thorndon Place, the new-built ſeat of Lord Petre; and, on the left of Ingateſtone, is Wiittle Park, another ſeat of his Lordſhip.

On the right of 31 is New Houſe, the ſeat of Rich. Hoare, Eſq; and on the left is New Hall, the ſeat of Lord Waltham.

Colcheſter Caſtle is a monument of the antiquity of that town; that fortreſs, together with the walls of the town, being built with Roman bricks: and the Roman coins dug up in the neighbouring grounds, are corroborating evidences of its Roman origin.

Near Ipſwich is Chriſtchurch, formerly a priory; now the ſeat of Tho. Fonnereau, Eſq. The houſe, though in an antient ſtile, is very commodious. The park is a great advantage to the town, being free to the inhabitants.

The pride of this county in building, is Greenwich Hospital; the external appearance of which, is rather that of an imperial palace, than a retreat for disabled and superannuated sailors. The adjoining park, though small, is a most delightful spot; and the prospects from Flamstead House, which is the Royal Observatory, and from One-tree Hill, are picturesque beyond all description. The bold descent of the hills, the groves, and hospital below, the winding river, decorated with vessels sailing up and down; the extensive landscape beyond, bounded on one side by a clear view of London, with all its spires, particularly the majestic dome of St. Paul's cathedral, form perhaps a group of objects not to be exceeded any where.

On the right of Blackheath is the ſeat of the late Sir Gregory Page, Bart. one of the fineſt private reſidences in England.

The ſtupendous cliffs at Dover, cannot perhaps be more ſtrikingly repreſented, than in the words of our great dramatic poet Shakeſpeare; who thus beautifully deſcribes them in his tragedy of King Lear.

"There is a cliff, whoſe high and bending head [deep—
Looks fearfully on the confined
How dizzy 'tis to caſt one's eyes ſo low! [the midway air,
The crows and choughs who wing
Shew ſcarce ſo groſs as beetles. Half way down
Hangs one that gathers ſamphire: dreadful trade! [his head.
Methinks he ſeems no bigger than
The fiſhermen that walk upon the beach [choring bark
Appear like mice; and yon tall anDiminiſhed to a cock; her cock a buoy [muring ſurge
Almoſt too ſmall for ſight: the murThat on th' unnumbered idle pebbles chafes, [no more,
Cannot be heard ſo high. I'll look
Leſt my brains turn, and the deficient ſight
Topple down headlong."

At Kenſington is one of his Majeſty's palaces, formerly belonging to the family of Finch, Earl of Nottingham. It was purchaſed by King William, who made conſiderable additions to it; but, as the preſent royal family have never reſided in it, the houſe and gardens have been greatly neglected. Yet, as it lies at a convenient diſtance from London, this circumſtance has been very favourable to the neighbouring inhabitants: the gardens being daily open for all decent company.

At 2, on the right, is Holland Houſe, the venerable ſeat of Lord Holland.

To the left of Turnham Green, is the late Earl of Burlington's, at Chiſwick, now the ſeat of the Duke of Devonſhire; here is alſo the ſeat of the late Earl of Grantham.

At 6, on the right, is Gunnerſbury Houſe, the ſeat of the Princeſs Amelia; ſituated between the two great weſtern roads, on an eminence near Ealing. This houſe was built by Mr. Webb; and though as plain as poſſible, there is a ſimple boldneſs in it, which graces all the works of that artiſt. The back front enjoys a fine proſpect of London, and over Surry.

On this ſide of Brentford, to the left, is Kew Bridge; on the other ſide of which is Kew Palace and gardens, which belonged to the late Princeſs Dowager of Wales.

At 8, on the left, is Sion Houſe, a ſeat of the Duke of Northumberland.

About a mile to the left of Hounſlow, is Whitton, a ſeat of the late Duke of Argyle; now in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Gotſling of Doctors Commons; and near it is Whitton Dean, the ſeat of Col. William Campbell.

At 21½, on the right, is Windſor Caſtle, the moſt beautifully ſituated royal palace in Great Britain. William the Conqueror, charmed with the ſituation of Windſor, built a caſtle here; Henry I. rebuilt and fortified it; Queen Eleanor, wife of Edward I. was ſo fond of it, that ſhe lay in with four children here. Edward III. who was born here, enlarged and beautified it, built the royal palace and chapel, together with St. George's Hall, and inſtituted here the Order of the Garter. The whole has been enlarged and embelliſhed by ſeveral of our kings down to William III. Their preſent Majeſties have greatly improved a pleaſant houſe of retirement belonging to the caſtle, wherein they reſide occaſionally.

At 22 is Shrubb's Hill, the Duke of Cumberland's Lodge.

Near Bagſhot is Bagſhot Park, the ſeat of the Earl of Albemarle.

At Early Wallop, near Baſingſtoke, the Earl of Portſmouth has a new-built ſeat, and another at Hurſborn.

At Andover is the seat of John Pollen, Esq; and on the left of that borough is Wherwell, the seat of Mr. Ironmonger.

Three miles to the right of Salisbury is Wilton, the magnificent seat of the Earl of Pembroke. As the first Philip Earl of Pembroke had a great taste for antiquities, he made Wilton House a perfect museum. The house and apartments are truly magnificent; and the garden front is esteemed one of the best designs of Inigo Jones.

On the right, a few miles on this side of Shaftsbury, are Wardour Castle, the seat of Lord Arundel; and Font-Hill, where a fine seat was built by the late William Beckford, Esq; Alderman of London.

A little on this side of Milborn Port, to the left of the road, is Stalbridge, the seat of Edward Walter, Esq.

At Sherborn is the seat of the Rev. Francis Seymour, Dean of Wells, and brother to the Duke of Somerset.

Three miles to the right of Crewkherne is Hinton St. George, the seat of Earl Pawlett.

At Ford is Ford Abbey, the seat of ——— Gwyn, Esq.

On the left, three miles beyond Axminster, is Shute, the seat of Sir John Pole, Bart.; and a little more to the left is Estcott, the seat of Sir Geo. Yonge, Bart.

Hallden, four miles from Exeter, is one of the best modern houses in the county; and was built by the late Sir Geo. Chudleigh, after the model of the Queen's Palace in St. James's Park.

On the other side of Tamar River, on the left, is Mount Edgcumbe, the seat of Lord Edgcumbe.

A few miles beyond Hale River is Godolphin, a seat of Lord Godolphin.

At Ambreſbury is a ſeat of the Duke of Queenſberry and Dover: and three miles beyond, on the left, is Stonehenge, one of the moſt remarkable remains of antiquity in the kingdom. It is ſituated near the ſummit of a hill, and conſiſts of the remains of two circular, and two oval, concentric ranges of upright ſtones of amazing magnitude.

Of theſe, the ſtones of the outer circle are connected by ponderous impoſts overhead, that fill the eye with amazement. Many of theſe ſtones are thrown down, and others are miſſing, having probably been uſed in maſonry for buildings in the neighbourhood; but enough remains to ſhew the original deſign; though antiquarians have not found it ſo eaſy to determine the purpoſe of ſuch an enormous open erection. It is however generally ſuppoſed to have been a temple of the Britiſh druids.

On the right of 88 is Tileshead, a ſeat of Lord Godolphin.

A few miles to the right, beyond Warminſter, is Longleat, the ancient and magnificent ſeat of Viſcount Weymouth.

At Maiden Bradley is a ſeat of the Duke of Somerſet; and a few miles beyond, to the left, is Stourton, the beautiful ſeat and gardens of Henry Hoare, Eſq.

On the left of Bruton is Bruton Abby, the ſeat of the late Lord Berkley of Stratton.

Enmore Caſtle is a ſeat of the Earl of Egmont.

Near Wantage is the fine vale of the White Horſe, which extends almoſt from Farringdon to Abingdon. Southward from the vale is a trench cut on the ſide of a high green hill, in the ſhape of a horſe; and is not badly executed. The trench is about a yard deep, and almoſt filled with chalk; ſo that, at a diſtance, it appears in the exact form of a white horſe, ſo large as to occupy nearly an acre of ground. It is ſaid to have been made to commemorate ſome Saxon victory; their device being ſtill a white horſe. It gives name to the hill, and to the valley.

At Lockinge, about three miles on this ſide of Wantage, is the ſeat of Mr. Weymondſel.

At Challow is the ſeat of the late John Bance, Eſq.

Adjoining to Woodſtock is Woodſtock Park, and Blenheim Houſe, a ſeat of the Duke of Marlborough. Blenheim Houſe is a vast and magnificent pile of building, a gift of parliament to the great John Duke of Marlborough, for gaining that victory which gives name to the house. The roof is adorned with a stone balluſtrade, and a profuſion of ſtatues. The lofty hall was painted by Sir James Thornhill, and the ceilings by La Guerre. The rooms are finely enriched with paintings and hangings, which latter repreſent the principal events of the Duke's life. The preſent Duke has made many improvements in the gardens.

At Charlebury is a ſeat of the Earl of Plymouth.

Near Chipping Norton are Rollrich Stones, a Stonehenge in miniature; being a circular range of great ſtones placed on their ends, being each from five to ſeven feet high. They are in all likelihood the remains of ſome druidical temple, or at leaſt of ſome erection ſimilar to Stonehenge.

Three miles beyond Buckingham, to the right, is Stow, rendered famous by the celebrated gardens of the late Lord Cobham, who left them to the late Earl Temple. The houſe is large, and has been moſtly rebuilt upon a magnificent plan; but the ornamental grounds are what chiefly attract the curious ſpectator, having great variety, being beautifully laid out, and adorned with temples, pavilions, obeliſcs, ſtatues, and buſtos, of many illuſtrious perſonages both ancient and modern.

From Edgware to Stanmore, on the left, is Cannon's Park, where the late Duke of Chandos built a moſt oſtentatious palace; which after his death was pulled down and ſold by piecemeal; as a purchaſer could not be found for the whole. The park is now the property of Mr. Hallet, late an upholſterer in London, who has built an elegant houſe where the Duke's ſtood; chiefly out of materials left upon the ſpot.

A little beyond Watford, on the left, is Caſhiobury Park, a ſeat of the Earl of Eſſex. The ſituation is the beſt in the county; the houſe is in the form of the Roman H, of which the middle, and the eaſt wings are modern, in a plain neat ſtile; but the left is old, and by no means correſponding. The park is large, with a fine ſtream running through it; beyond which the park riſes in a gentle hill well planted with lime-trees. There are pleaſing wood walks behind the houſe, and ſome trees in the park of great age and ſize.

To Carliſle, by Kendal, p. 100.

Keſwick, though a poor village, receives great benefit from the reſort of gentry, to ſee the romantic lakes and mountains that ſurround it. The lake is computed to be ten miles in circumference, and contains five woody iſlands. On one ſide of the lake is a rich beautiful landſcape of cultivated fields, riſing to the eye in fine inequalities; with noble groves, happily diſpoſed, climbing the adjacent hills, ſhade above ſhade, in the moſt pictureſque forms. On the oppoſite ſhore are rocks and cliffs of ſtupendous height, hanging broken over the lake in horrible grandeur; ſome of them a thouſand feet high, with woods upon their ſteep and ſhaggy ſides, where mortal foot never yet approached. On these dreadful heights the eagles build their nests; and a variety of waterfalls pouring from the summits, tumble from rock to rock in terrible magnificence: while, on all sides of this immense amphitheatre, the lofty mountains pierce the clouds in spiry fantastic shapes.

The traveller who visits Keswick, will be amply rewarded for his labour in gaining the top of Mount Skiddow, by the amazing prospect it will afford him.

The coal mines at Whitehaven are worth any traveller's attention. The principal entrance is by an opening at the bottom of a hill, through a descending passage hewn through the rock, which leads to the lowest vein of coal. Galleries intersect galleries; all the coal being cut away, excepting immense pillars left to support the ponderous roof of soil over them. These mines are said to be sunk to the depth of 130 fathom, and to extend under the sea, where there is water over them for vessels of burden. There are very curious expedients made use of in this colliery to procure currents of fresh air, to guard against the explosion of damps, and to drain off water.

At 30, on the right, is Luton Hoo, the ſeat of the Earl of Bute.

On the right, near Silſoe, is Wreſt, the ſeat of the Marchioneſs Grey.

Three miles beyond Clophill, a little to the right hand of the road, is Hawnes, the ſeat of Earl Granville.

At Clapham is the ſeat of the Earl of Aſhburnham.

At Oakley is a neat ſeat of the Duke of Bedford.

A mile beyond Chellington, on the left, is Harold Church and village; — and on the right, about a mile from the road, is Odell Caſtle, the ſeat of Sir Thomas Aſton, Bart.

At Boughton, within two miles of Kettering, is a noble ſeat, erected by the firſt Duke of Montagu, after the model of the royal palace of Verſailles.

At Oxenden, near Kettering, is a remarkable echo, that will diſtinctly repeat a ſentence of twelve or thirteen ſyllables.

Rockingham Caſtle is the ſeat of Lord Sondes. A lofty caſtle was built here by William the Conqueror, on the ſide of a hill, ſtrongly fortified by ditches and ramparts; great part of which is ſtill ſtanding. The foreſt round it is a noble one.

On the right of Okeham is Burley on the Hill, the ſeat of the Earl of Winchelſea; — and on the right of 102, is Whiſſendine, the ſeat of the Earl of Harborough.

Two miles beyond Melton Mowbray, on the left, is a ſeat belonging to the family of Bennet.

Four miles beyond Nottingham, on the right, is Baſkwood Park.

Two miles beyond Papplewick, is Newſtead Abbey, the ſeat of Lord Byron.

At 158½, on the left, is Hornby Caſtle, the ſeat of the Earl of Holderneſs.

Wentworth Houſe, near Rotherham, is the ſeat of the late Marquis of Rockingham. It ſtands in the midſt of a moſt beautiful country; the houſe is magnificent, and the park and environs are, if poſſible, more noble than the edifice.

Sandbeck, near Rotherham, is a fine ſeat belonging to the Earl of Scarborough. The houſe is large, and built out of a quarry at Roche Abbey; the ſtone is whiter than Portland, and dazzles the eye when the ſun ſhines upon it. A houſe of ſo pure a whiteneſs, in the midſt of ſpreading plantations, and backed by a noble wood of 500 acres, has a fine effect. In the ornamented grounds, a vale floated with water is ſurrounded by ſlopes, crowned by thick woods; and the whole, in whatever direction, appears to great advantage.

Kiveton, about ſix miles from Rotherham, is an elegant ſeat of the Duke of Leeds: the ſituation is in a wholeſome air, and commands fine proſpects. Here are pleaſant gardens, a beautiful park, and a fine canal.

Wentworth Caſtle, near Barnſley, is a noble ſeat of the Earl of Strafford. The new front to the lawn is extremely light and elegant; but this ſeat is more famous for its ornamented environs, than for the houſe itſelf.

A mile on this ſide of Almondſbury, is Woodſom Hall, the ſeat of Sir John Liſter Kaye, Bart.

A mile beyond Kildwick is Humblethorp Hall and Park.

Skipton Caſtle, is the ſeat of the Earl of Thanet.

Bolton Caſtle, near Skipton, is the ſeat of the Duke of Bolton.

At Alnwick is Alnwick Castle, a seat of the Duke of Northumberland. It is situated on the south side of the river Aln, on an elevation that gives great dignity to its appearance; and in antient times must have contributed to its security. From some remains of antiquity it is believed to have been founded in the time of the Romans, though no part of the original structure now remains. The castle includes about five acres of ground within its outer wall, which is strengthened with sixteen towers, that are now converted into offices for the family.

One mile on this side of Dunbar, on the right, is Broxmouth, a seat of the Duke of Roxborough.

† A traveller from Durham to Appleby, is to trace this road backward; and ſo of all the reſt.

At ſeven, on the left, is Streatham Caſtle, a ſeat of the Earl of Strathmore.

About the diſtance of two miles from Bowes, is a ſingular natural curioſity, called God's Bridge; being a limeſtone rock, forming a rude arch, ſixteen feet wide, acroſs the river Gretta, and a paſſage for carriages over, about twenty feet wide.

At Raby is Raby Caſtle and Park, belonging to the Earl of Darlington, a noble and maſſy edifice of its kind, uninjured by any modern innovations inconſiſtent with the original ſtile of the building. The ſouth front is very beautiful; the centre of which is from a deſign of Inigo

Jones. The park and ornamented grounds round the houſe, are diſpoſed with great taſte.

At Biſhop's Aukland is Aukland Caſtle and Park, a palace of the Biſhop of Durham.

GENERAL HINTS

FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF HORSES.

THE natural food for a horſe is herbage and grain; which, if good in quality, and given with judgment, will, with proper dreſſing and exerciſe, preſerve him from thoſe complicated diſorders he is expoſed to by improper treatment. Bleeding and purging ſhould never be had recourſe to, but upon emergencies that evidently dictate ſuch operations.

When a horſe ſtands much in the ſtable, the following recipe is excellent for cooling and purifying the blood.

Take crocus of antimony finely powdered, half an ounce, nitre one ounce; mix them together, and divide the whole into two parts; let one of theſe portions be given in a feed of corn, or maſh of ſcalded bran, every night and morning: if in corn, moiſten it ſo that the powder may ſtick to it.

Bleeding may become neceſſary, when a horſe ſtands much in the ſtable, is full fed, and has little or no exerciſe; when his legs ſwell, or his eyes look heavy or inflamed; alſo when he is thriving, or rubbing his hair off; and in inflammatory fevers, falls, bruiſes, or ſtrains attended with inflammation. It is prudent to bleed by meaſure; and, in common caſes, two or three quarts may be ſufficient.

Before a perſon ſets out on a journey, he ought to examine his horſe's feet, to ſee that his ſhoes are all faſt, and well fitted; for on theſe circumſtances in great meaſure depend the ſafety and pleaſure of the journey.

A ſore back is very common to young horſes, who are unuſed to carry loads; therefore to theſe, a large-ſeated ſaddle agrees beſt, carefully ſtuffed ſo as to bear as evenly as poſſible. Every morning, the crupper ſhould be altered a hole or two, to ſhift the ſaddle backward or forward, that he may not always carry the weight of his rider in the ſame place; which will conduce greatly to his eaſe, and keep his ſkin whole. Sore backs, like all other ailments, are better prevented than cured; a horſe's back ſhould therefore be cooled every time he is baited, and now and then waſhed with warm water, and dried with a linen cloth. Hang the ſaddle in the ſun or near a fire to dry; and before it is put on again, examine that no bits of dirt or other inequalities ſtick round the ſeat or the pannel.

The beaſt that carries us, is intitled, as well from ſelf-intereſt as from humanity, to our utmoſt attention and regard; therefore never ſuffer your horſe to drink at a pond ſo near the end of his journey, as that he may not have ſufficient exerciſe afterward to warm the water in his belly: and never truſt his due portions of corn to the integrity of an hoſtler.

Uſeful Hints relating to the Shoeing of Horſes.

As the feet of horſes differ, the ſhoes ought to differ accordingly: but the conceited obſtinacy of common ignorant farriers, is beyond conception! They are ſure and poſitive in every thing they ſay; they work with ill-will whenever they are obliged to follow the inſtructions of their employers; and have been known even to lame the horſe they take in hand, purpoſely to charge the fault on thoſe who will not give them their own way. They are very free with their diabolical butteris; but the frog of a horſe's foot ſhould never be cut out, though, as it will ſometimes grow ragged, it may be cleaned now and then, and the ragged pieces pared off with a knife. The weight of ſhoes ought to be proportioned to the quality of the iron; for ſhoes cannot be made too light, provided they are ſufficiently thick to prevent their bending: as the bending of a ſhoe will force out the nails and ruin the hoof. Farriers generally make ſhoes thicker at the heel than at the toe, eſpecially for hard-working horſes; whereas the greateſt wear of the ſhoe being at the toe, as appears from its wearing out there firſt, it ſhould there be made the ſtrongeſt. The utmoſt ſeverity is due to all farriers who clap ſhoes on hot, out of lazineſs, to make the feet fit the ſhoe, inſtead of fitting ſhoes to the feet. This practice dries up and deſtroys the hoof; many a horſe has had his ſole ſo much inflamed by a hot ſhoe, as to be dangerouſly lamed: ſome have even loſt their lives by ſuch treatment. Four nails on each ſide hold a ſhoe on better than a greater number, and keep the hoof in a far better ſtate. The toe ſhould be cut ſhort and nearly ſquare, juſt rounding off the angles; but no nails muſt be driven there, this being an abſurd practice: leaving room to drive nails at the toe, cauſes the hoof to be of an improper length; and that part of the hoof being the moſt brittle, nails ſeldom ſtay in there, but tear out and damage the foot. Bar ſhoes are never uſeful, except for a ſhort time, to defend a damaged part of the foot, when a poor horſe cannot be ſpared from work, during the cure.

A Plaiſter for a galled Back.

Take the white of an egg, a little wheat flour, a little yeaſt, and a ſpoonful of brandy; mix them thoroughly, and ſpread it thin on ſoft leather, ſuch as women's gloves: if you are on a journey, you may nevertheleſs ride on this plaiſter, without ſtopping the effect of it.

For ſtopping a Horſe's Feet.

After a hard journey ſtop your horſe's feet with the following balls:—Take two or three handfuls of bran; put it into a ſaucepan with as much greaſe of any kind, as will moiſten it; make it hot, and put a ball of it into each foot, with ſpleets over it to keep it in. Never waſh your horſe's legs after a hard journey, with water unwarmed; for cold water ſhuts up the pores.

Bruiſes.

If a horſe is bruiſed by a fall or a blow; after bleeding him, rub the bruiſed parts once or twice a day with a mixture compoſed of verjuice, four ounces; oil of turpentine, one ounce; and bole armenic, half an ounce.

Strains.

Rub the part affected, with the following compoſition, once or twice a day.

Take an ounce of aquafortis, two drams of camphor diſſolved in half an ounce of ſpirit of wine, one ounce of nitre, eight ounces of vinegar, four ounces of oil of turpentine, and half an ounce of white lead: ſhake them well together in a bottle for uſe.

Reſt, or at leaſt eaſy travelling, is abſolutely neceſſary after ſtrains.

Wounds.

Wounds in the legs ſhould never be dreſſed with greaſy applications; but with healing and bracing remedies; of which, the following is recommended: Egyptiacum, four ounces, Friar's balſam, two ounces, and oil of turpentine, half an ounce. This mixture may be introduced into a deep wound with a ſyringe; ſome lint being afterward applied over the mouth, to retain the medicine, ſecured by a plaiſter of bees wax and oil of turpentine: the whole being kept on with a bandage.

All wounds in fleſhy parts, after being waſhed from the blood, muſt be carefully ſearched; and if the mouth is too ſmall to admit the finger, it muſt be enlarged, that it may be cleared of extraneous bodies. If it bleeds much, dreſs it with a ſkewer dipped in oil of vitriol, with a bit of ſublimate in it: for all fleſhy wounds, where no tendons or ſinews are injured, ſhould be firſt dreſſed with this ſtyptic. If the wound ſhould bleed faſt, fill the cavity with a paſte made of a handful of freſh nettles pounded, four ounces of blue vitriol pounded, wheat flour, two ounces, and four ounces of vinegar, all beat up together; cover the wound with a pledget of hurds, and ſecure the whole with a bandage. After this dreſſing has remained on ten or twelve hours, remove it, and apply the following digeſtive ointment.—Take half a pound of red lead, a quarter of a pound of common ſalt; pound them together, and add the yolks of three eggs; and a quart of linſeed oil by little and little; ſtir them well together, and bottle up the mixture for uſe. To apply this ointment, take a handful of rue leaves pulled ſmall, put them in a ſufficient quantity of the ointment, fill the wound with them, and ſecure it as before; ſtitching up the lips, if neceſſary. Cut the ſtitches the ſecond day, and repeat the dreſſing with a tent of hurds dipped in the ointment; but after the ſwelling ſubſides, and the wound diſcharges good matter, it need not be tented any longer. But if the lips of the wound gape, dreſs it with Friar's balſam, and afterwards ſprinkle a little powdered roſin on the ſame to heal it.

For a Cold.

Take of aniſeed one ounce, liquorice one ounce, diapente one ounce, fenugreek one ounce, elecampane one ounce, ſix-pennyworth of Venice treacle, and three ſpoonfuls of honey: boil them in three pints of ale, with an onion or head of garlick. Divide it into three doſes; and give the horſe a doſe blood-warm, while he is faſting, for three mornings ſucceſſively.

For the Gripes, or Colic.

When a horſe is colicked, it is too cuſtomary to give him a large quantity of gin; or pepper or grains of paradiſe in ale; but ſuch doſes rather tend to increaſe the diſorder. As ſoon as a horſe is diſcovered to have the colic, give him a drink thus prepared:—Tincture of opium two drams, ſweet ſpirit of nitre half an ounce, Friar's balſam half an ounce; mix them together for one doſe, and give them in a pint of warm ale. If the diſorder does not go off, repeat the doſe in two hours, give him a clyſter, and keep him warm.

Botts.

Botts in the ſtomach are commonly of a red colour; thoſe in the ſtrait gut are white. The former generally infeſt the horſe at the latter end of a dry ſummer, when ponds are low and ſwarm with inſects: the ſigns of them are, the horſe looking poor, and not thriving with his food; being ſometimes griped, and often ſtriking his hind feet againſt his belly. Theſe ſigns are confirmed by his voiding them with his dung; and a cure may be effected by giving him at night, two drams of calomel, and half an ounce of myrrh, powdered, made into a ball with conſerve of wormwood.

The white botts are eaſily got rid of, by giving him half an ounce of ſavin, dried and powdered, in a feed of corn moiſtened, once or twice a day for a week or ten days.

Broken Wind.

A broken-winded horſe, that had been put into a field, where there was no water, except in the bottom of an old lime kiln, was, after ſome time, found to have recovered his wind: and, upon this diſcovery, another old broken-winded horſe, with a conſtant cough, was cured in the ſtable in about five weeks, by drinking a bucket of lime water every day.—Take two pounds of quick lime, and put to it twelve gallons of water; mix it over night, pouring on the water gradually, and ſtirring it till the ebullition ſubſides; then leave it to ſettle for uſe the next day. This medicine occaſions no inconvenience, as it does not require the horſe to be kept up from his uſual work.
